Description

A charming example of late 19th-century treen, this vintage turned wooden bowl showcases both craftsmanship and timeless appeal. Likely made from sycamore, it features a beautifully shaped form with a substantial, thick rim that gives it a reassuring weight and presence. Twin tram lines encircle the body, adding subtle decorative detail and highlighting the skill of the turner.

With its warm patina and character developed over time, this piece is as decorative as it is functional. Whether used as a fruit bowl or as a standalone display item, it brings a touch of rustic elegance and history to any setting.
