Description

Victorian Scottish Arrow Brooch, Kilt Pin.

A striking example of 19th-century Scottish jewellery, this antique arrow-shaped brooch, kilt pin or label pin showcases exquisite craftsmanship and attention to detail. The arrowhead and fletching are finely engraved in sterling silver, the shaft is made of polished natural octagonal agate, highlighting its unique patterns and warm, earthy tones. Fitted with a safety chain and pin and a hinged C-clasp, this arrow pin brooch reflects authentic Victorian construction.

Arrow motifs were especially popular in late 19th- and early 20th-century jewellery, often symbolizing love (Cupid's arrow), protection, or a passion for archery—a fashionable sport with social significance during the Victorian and Edwardian eras.

A charming and decorative example of archery-themed jewellery, perfect for collectors or lovers of historic Scottish design.
